GAWF'S QUESTION:

Should wild animals be kept in a zoo? Would they be happier living in their natural environment?

Q. Should wild animals be kept in a zoo?

PUPILS ANSWERS:

I think wild animals shouldn't be kept in a zoo. Animals should be able to live free in the nature so they can adapt to their habitat. Another reason why they shouldn't be kept in zoos is because they have to learn how to kill animals so they are able to eat them. Also last but not least, animals should live free in the environment so they can act like animals and not like humans locked in houses.

Renee

The animals shouldn't be kept in a zoo. The animals should live in their natural environment and not be locked in a cage, because they are happy there!

THE ZOO SHOULD NOT BE A HOME FOR ANIMALS!
PUT YOURSELF IN THEIR "SHOES"!

THEY HAVE A LIFE!

DON'T LOCK IT IN A CAGE!

Maroussa

Animals shouldn't be kept in a zoo, because they are not free there! Their natural environment is better for them, because they are free and they can do anything they want and they can feed on everything.

Dinos

No, because they have a life too!

Stelios

PUPILS ANSWERS:

I think that people mustn't keep the wild animals in the zoo. They must live in the forest. Some of them run fast, the camel stores water, the snake has green colours for camouflage, etc., but people take them to the zoo and they aren't happy.

Joanna

Animals shouldn't be kept in a zoo, because they are not happy and free. In my opinion keeping animals behind bars is wicked and evil. Before capturing wild animals ask yourself: "Would I like to live in a cage?" and the answer is no, you wouldn't!

LET ANIMALS LIVE IN THEIR NATURAL HABITAT!!!

Holly

I think that wild animals shouldn't be kept in a zoo, because they aren't happy, free or comfortable. So, in my opinion they must live in their natural environment, free and happy, like humans, because all of the animals must be living free, because they have a life too!!!

Katerina I.

I think the animals mustn't live in the zoo, because they aren't happy. If we take the animals out of the zoo back to the forest, they will be happy!
